FOREWORD

Chaplin as Adenoid Hynkel making that infamous speech

This work requires little introduction or explanation, and certainly no apology for publishing it in the first place. Everyone will be familiar with the name. A quick perusal will soon establish its intent. That world leaders set themselves up for satirical swipes and endless ridicule is certain, no more so than Adolf Hitler himself, who was soon lambasted by journalists, cartoonists and caricaturists when he came to power in Germany as Chancellor in 1933. Not long after achieving that role, many were sceptical of his hidden agenda and real motives. His high-postured bolstering self-image also helped to lend itself to the jovial spur, thus immediately laying himself open to flak from all quarters. By the time he became Fuhrer, the target for satire was very much on the wall.

In 1940 our very own Charlie Chaplin levelled his spleen at Hitler in his film The Great Dictator (as above), satirically condemning not only Hitler, but also Benito Mussolini, fascism, anti-Semitism, and Nazism in general at a time when the States was not even in the war and still neutral. Not long after that even Walt Disney got in on the act, with many anti-Hitler and anti-Nazi satirists to follow. And one must not forget, of course, the pioneering work of John Heartfield (not included here).

What is included in Hitleresque is a selection of over 200 illustrations, presented in no particular order, many drawing on World War Two propaganda posters, postcards, cartoons appearing in various magazines, newspapers, etc., and a few of my own conceiving. But please note that although the artwork is from original sources, much of it has been modified to give it a new spin. Thus you will find the words have been changed—to make the illustrations more humorous in many instances. Some may find this approach inexcusable, even offensive. All I can say is—like many so-called literary agents who are fond of saying it—the business is purely subjective, yet we find that retaining a sense of humour does us a world of good in a world seemingly gone mad.

Satire is thus our saving grace.

Mit dem Führer bei der deutschen Flotte

Am 22. März 1939 kommt aus Kopenhagen, der Hauptstadt Dänemarks, die Nachricht, daß der dänische Ministerpräsident die Entscheidung des Deutschen Reiches die Zustimmung zur Übergabe des dänischen Reiches an Deutschland gegeben hat. Der Führer beordert daraufhin die in der Mitte stehenden deutschen Geschwader an die Küste, um sich selbst an der Spitze der deutschen Flotte ins besetzte Dänemark zu begeben. Unter der Führung des Führers, begleitet von den deutschen Admirälen, werden die dänischen Geschwader an der Küste empfangen. Die deutsche Flotte ist eine große deutsche Flottenmacht.

John Bull wird alt, und lernt nichts dazu!

Die Geschichte vom ewigen Juden

Es war vor vielen Jahren, da traf im Westen der ewige Jude ein. Immer wieder führte ihn seine ruhelose Wanderschaft um die Welt. Nirgendwo gab es ein festes Heim, das ihn festhalten konnte, denn seine Antunft wirkte wie Pest und Tod, und wo er hinkam, verbrannte und zerstörte alle Schönheit. Er achtete ihrer nicht. Sein Knotenstock klappte die Blumen am Wegrand, und sein breiter Fuß schritt mit Hohn über grüne Saat.

So kam er im Westen an. Ruhelos durchwanderte er die Straßen der großen Stadt. Für Augenblicke blieb er bei den Menschen stehen und schaute sich in ihre Unterhaltung. Dann er wieder ging, brannte in diesen Menschen ein böses Feuer. Das böse Feuer, das immer weiter ausbreitete, dafür trug er Sorge. Ihm war kein Frieden beschieden, drum trug er auch den Unfrieden in alle Welt. Er sammelte Menschen um sich, an die er auspeitschende Reden hielt. Das Feuer durchdrang die Stadt, sprang in den Palast des Königs, erdrückte die Gefängnistürme, und doch schlugen seine Flammen über der Stadt zusammen. Befriedigt sah der ewige Jude, wie Blutstöße durch die Straßen flossen, und sah sein Werk erfüllt. Er entzündete seinen Knotenstock an dem Stempel zu einer Fackel und machte sich auf nach Osten.

Wo er durch ein stilles Dorf kam, hielt er die Fackel an die Strohdächer der Hütten, und so ward sein Weg angezündet. So durch eine Rauchsäule, des Nachts durch eine Feuerfackel.

„Du Lort!“ sprach er zum Bauer auf dem Feld. „Was plagt du dich ab? Nur damit deine Herren zu essen haben! Es gibt aber keinen Herrn als du selbst und dein Verstand.“

Da ließ der Bauer seinen Pflug, schüttelte sich als Herr und feierte.

„Du Lort!“ sprach der ewige Jude zum Arbeiter. „Was plagt du dich ab? Nur um deine Herren zu bereichern! Es gibt aber keinen Herrn als du selbst und dein Verstand.“

Da ließ der Arbeiter die Werkzeuge, schüttelte sich als Herr und feierte. So wanderte der ewige Jude durch Europa. Überall loderte sein Feuer auf, hier in gewaltiger Höhe, dort in kleinen glühenden Flämmchen. Und wo er hinkam, fand Volk auf wider Volk, Bürger wider Bürger, Freund wider Freund.

Eines Tages war der ewige Jude verschunden. Keiner mehr sah ihn. Die Menschen sahen und sahen, man glaubte, daß er

EXCLUSIVE by DICK SAXTY

Zany comic Freddie Starr was forced to eat his own words last night after losing a bet.

Starr, famous for his onstage antics and buffoonery, and for dressing up as Hitler, always clowning around in his ridiculous costumes and goose-stepping across the stage, lost a wager to a friend who quipped, "If you act like Hitler, you must think like him," and bet him that he couldn't eat his own words.

To his amazement, Starr picked up a copy of Mein Kampf—the notorious book by Adolf Hitler, written when he was in prison where he extols the virtues of the Aryan race and his anti-Semitism, etc.,—and then began to eat it right before his eyes.

STRUGGLE

However, the joke soon backfired when Starr started struggling to eat 'My Struggle' and gave up.

The star, now 43, said it was a bet he will not

JEWEL IN MY CROWN

By MURIEL BURDEN

THE vicar whose daughter was raped by the "spider-men" gang praised the 21-year old girl's courage last night.

With tears in his eyes he said: "She is the jewel in my crown."

The vicar, whose skull was fractured in the attack, was speaking from his hospital bed as police were early today quizzing FIVE men and a WOMAN about the crime.

He said: "I am deeply

Justice

The girl's boyfriend was also beaten unconscious during the attack in a West London Vicarage.

Of the men, the vicar said: "I want to see justice done. I think this country is soft on justice.

"But not once have I felt hatred of felt vengeful. I feel sad for them. They were a trio of derelicts.

"And if I am a Christian minister, preaching a gospel of reconciliation and hope for the outcasts of this world, I would have no gospel if I did not have that in my heart.

"Clergymen are supposed to be plaster saints. But I can say that in all honesty, not because I am a clergyman, but as a man who has been bashed up."

Thousands of messages and cards have been sent to the vicarage in six days since the attack.

The vicar added: "I will not be able to write personally to everyone. But I hope they will take this as my deep appreciation of their kind words and thoughts."
